Dear Dr. Sandip

The Origin Foundation has done the great work.
Your dedicated service to the Government Medical Colleges and Hospitals has helped our organization a lot. This has improved the communication skill among the resident doctors. This has helped the Institution in reducing incidence of attacks on doctors.

Though the Government of Maharashtra has not provided the financial support, you continued to work without any monetary gain.

Yours Faithfully,
Dr. Pravin H. Shingare
Director Medical Education & Research,

Friday to teach students communication skills on how to deal patients

Medicos to be trained in communication

Arpita.Sharad@timesgroup.com
Aurangabad: Often heated arguments between doctors and their patients' relatives take violent turns and the medical practitioners are attacked. Taking a serious note of the issue, the health department decided to train doctors in communication skills.

Minister for medical education Girish Mahajan has approved a state-wide movement 'Susanwaad Abhiyaan' to train and polish soft skills of medical professionals.

A Thane-based social organisation Origin Foundation is facilitating the movement. Hospitals across the state have witnessed around 60 cases of attacks on doctors by their patients' kin in the past two years.

Doctor groups such as The Maharashtra Association of Resident Doctors (MARD) and Indian Medical Association (IMA) have expressed dissent over the incidents and the security management at government and private hospitals have been made stricter. Yet the incidents keep recurring.

A resident doctor was in the Government Medical College and Hospital (GMCH) was assaulted by an HIV positive patients' kin after he died on November 12. After this incident the GMCH hosted a four-hour workshop at Mahatma Gandhi auditorium on Saturday under the Susanwaad project.

The head of GMCH's medical unit Sayodee Afroz said, "Origin Foundation's Sandeep Mane conducted eight sessions at the workshop which was attended by 250 people. The workshop was attended by 100 resident doctors, students and interns. It helped them understand how bad news such as cancer or declaring the patient dead should be broken down to the patients' relatives, to avoid conflict."

Senior resident doctor at GMCH Pranay Jambhulkar said, "The role-play method in the workshop guided us on how to deal with day-to-day things. They pointed out the mistakes made by taking real life examples."

The GMCH dean asked the audience to keep the patient and kin informed about the treatment.

Dr Sandeep Mane, founder president of 'Origin Foundation', who is voluntarily delivering these lectures to students, said, "Relationship between doctors and patients have unfortunately deteriorated and we need to start rebuilding this. Now, patients have become intelligent, they read up on Google and they want good services. Doctors should be transparent with their patients and should not hold back any facts."

"In the workshop we create scenarios and asked doctors to react to a particular situation. Our education system focuses on knowledge and does not give these skills to our future doctors. But these young students want to learn them all and I am receiving a positive response from them," he added.

Dr Ajay Chandanwale, dean of B J Medical College, said, "We need to understand the western theory for doctor-patient relationship and should also incorporate it in our syllabus according to our needs. This will certainly benefit our students."

For Nurses

Rajiv Gandhi Medical College, Kalwa

“Susanwaad Abhiyaan” - The state-wide Communication Skills movement once again reached the hometown of Origin, Thane, for Communication Skills training for Nurses. Over the years, Nursing profession did not get its due recognition for various reasons. Origin Foundation would like to offer training for Nurses to enhance respect for Nurses. Respected Dean Madam, Dr. Sandhya Khadse, supported the workshop whole-heartedly. Origin Foundation has a dream of achieving the best care for patients by improving the available healthcare services in India.

Empowering the weak children, especially girls...

India has 20 million Orphans. This number is growing on a daily basis. They live in desperate conditions and need help. Various houses across the country give them food and shelter, but much more needs to be done. Majority of these children are girls. They need assistance to prepare them for an independent life outside their care home. Origin Foundation believes that these children can be empowered by giving them education and skills to develop their confidence. They can become a meaningful force and contribute to the society in a very useful way.

Educating the students of Savitri Jotirao, Social Work College, Yavatmal

The Origin Foundation spoke to the students at the Social Work College to inspire and motivate them to contribute to the social development in a concrete manner. The reasons for current social issues were analysed and a path to solve these issues was defined. It was a very interactive session. The students were highly influenced and charged. Each of them could become a torchbearer to bring about a change in the society.

Phase of Donation

A New thought for the next generation

12 year old Rushabh Mane chose to welcome 2018 by planting a tree. More importantly, he had no party, no screaming and no dancing on 31st December 2017. He was happy to spend time shopping with his father, having dinner with grandparents at home, enjoying a game of carrom and peacefully sleeping in time, looking forward to starting a New year with his idea of planting a tree. He made a positive start to the New year 2018 with a creative idea which should inspire and motivate him to have a successful year ahead of him. He chose to walk his own path and encouraged me to believe that it is not always necessary to follow the crowd. I believe his path will lead him to understand the true meaning of happiness in life.

A Birthday celebration – The Joy of Giving

Rushabh Mane chose to celebrate his 12th birthday at an Orphanage today with his family and friends. We all wished him on his birthday (3rd January), but he did not expect a party or any gifts from friends. He enjoyed serving lunch with his own hands to the girls at the Orphanage. He distributed gifts to the children and spent some quality time with them. They were between 5 to 15 years age. All the girls sang birthday songs for him in a loud chorus, had lunch and went to their school. The girls enjoyed our company and they even crowded around the car till the gate. The joy of giving on a birthday felt far more enjoyable than the joy of taking attention and gifts on a birthday. I believe that children should be encouraged to donate on their birthdays. Father's day, Mother's day, Teacher's day is a celebration of giving, but "Birthday" is generally about taking. In my view, there should be an International Day of Donation to encourage the idea of giving.
